TWO NEW DIRECTORS JOIN THE CFCC BOARD

For Release: January 21, 2009 Waldorf, MD – Community Foundation of Charles County announces two new Board members: James DiMisa and Cary Stalnaker. "The Community Foundation feels very fortunate to have both agreed to serve on our board. Both live and work in Charles County and will bring significant experience and leadership to the Board," stated Kevin Wedding, Chairman of the CFCC Board.

CFCC's mission is to improve the quality of life for the community of Charles County by aligning philanthropic interests with community needs through stewardship and collaboration. Since its inception, CFCC has completed a Priority Needs Assessment, administers seven funds, introduced a web site, published a newsletter, kicked-off its grant program, collaborates on a variety of successful projects and will continue to move forward to make Charles County the best place to live and give.

"Jim and Cary will bring so many great qualities to the Community Foundation. Both of them share our interest in building regional approaches to addressing community issues" stated CFCC's Vice-Chair, Brad Howard.

James "Jim" DiMisa is Executive Vice President, Chief Operating Officer of Community Bank of Tri-County. He received his Associate of Arts from the Charles County Community College.
